

cha

Coffee jobs, good vibes.

Matching San Francisco cafés with baristas in hours, not weeks.

Cafés can't hire fast enough

Short-notice gaps, slow pipelines, and tools that were never built for coffee.

A gap opens overnight

A barista quits or calls out. The shop needs someone this week, not next month.

Hiring is a time sink

Sifting applications and running interviews between rushes. Hours every week.

Résumés don't predict fit

Cafés hire on personality and vibe. Job boards rank PDFs.

75%

annual staff turnover in restaurants

$2-5K

to replace a single hourly employee

Sources: 7shifts · Cornell hospitality research

Today's fixes are temporary: group chats, window signs, and résumé job boards.

Validated by 4 Bay Area cafés

4/4

cafés we interviewed are interested in using cha

Most run on improvised tools

Some use no hiring software at all. One fills every role through a single group chat.

“Very slow and tedious”

Cafés that do use formal tools described hiring exactly that way: slow, manual, repetitive.

All four are interested

Every owner we spoke with expressed interest in using cha for their next hire.

Red Door Coffee

Erik's DeliCafe

Bluestone Cafe

Joe & The Juice

The fix: a standing pool, matched on fit

Applicants tell cha where they'll work, when they're free, and what they're like, with a 30-second video instead of a résumé. The moment a shop needs someone, cha surfaces ranked, ready-to-work candidates.

Baristas: where, when & a 30s hello

Owners: post a role, get a ranked shortlist

Matched on shift fit. Hired in one tap

Maya • Mission District

Barista • 2 yrs on espresso

Mornings

Weekends

Latte art

0:30 hello: "Hi, I'm Maya!"

94% match

Ritual Roasters

Needs: weekend opener • Mission

Posted 2h ago • 3 candidates surfaced

Why cha wins

Hours, not weeks

A standing pool of ready applicants means an open shift can be filled the same day it appears.

Vibes are the résumé

30-second hellos and preference matching find people who fit the shop, not just the schedule.

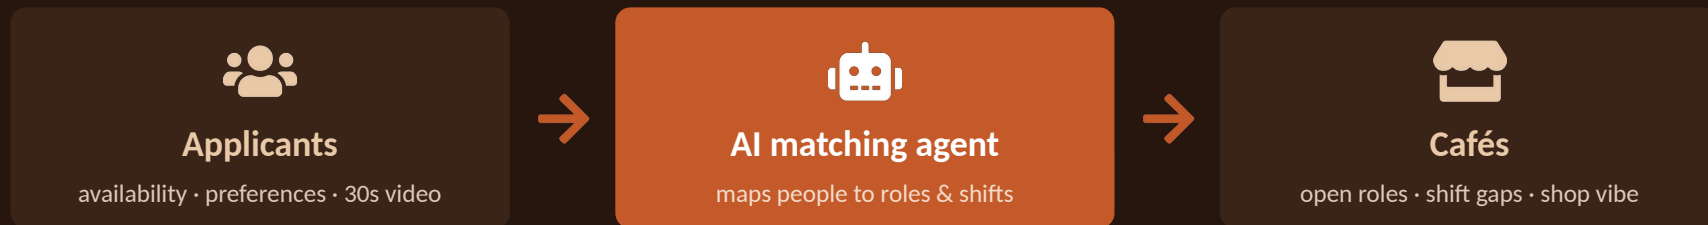

Runs itself

Matching is autonomous. Owners see a ranked shortlist, never a stack of résumés.

Live today at cha-ef.vercel.app · signups are open for both applicants and cafés

Next: an AI agent runs the matching

THE AGENT

- Reads each applicant: hello video, availability, preferences
- Learns every shop's vibe and role needs from listings and past hires
- Matches, reaches out, and schedules trial shifts

FUTURE DIRECTIONS

- Pilot with our 4 cafés, then expand across SF
- Cut post-training churn: competency checks after training eat manager time and often end in re-hiring. cha will verify skills up front and learn from trial-shift outcomes.
- Become the hiring layer for every local hourly job cha · coffee jobs, good vibes · cha-ef.vercel.app